Legendary clipper brand, Wahl, has quite the history. Founded in 1919 by American Leo J. Wahl, the company prides itself as being the first in the world to invent and patent the electric hair clipper. Today, the firm remains at the forefront of the grooming industry and claims to produce tools used by over 90% of Barbers. But what about us ol' amateurs sitting alone in lockdown with Mop Top 'dos that would put The Beatles to shame? Luckily, Wahl produces some of the best consumer hair clippers that we can use from the comfort of our own homes, too. The brand's most recent release is the Rapid Clip - a close-trimming hair clipper designed to work around the contours of the head for an easier, quicker cut.We've given the clippers a whirl the past week to find out if they can match the pro trimming tools you'd find in the salon. Here goes...(Image credit: Future)Wahl Rapid Clip Review: Price And AvailabilityThe Wahl Rapid Clip was first released during the midst of the pandemic in August 2020 and is still available to buy now with an RRP of £49.99. A quick google, though, and you're likely to pick them up from some online retailer for a few pounds cheaper.In the box you'll get the cordless clipper, 10 comb attachments (#0.5-8mm), one right and left ear taper comb (#0.7-25mm), a pair of scissors, a barber comb and a styling comb, blade oil, cleaning brush, charger and a decent quality travel bag to store it all in.(Image credit: Future)Wahl Rapid Clip Review: DesignThe Wahl Rapid Clip hair clippers' design harps back to the more classic aesthetic of traditional barber clippers, and we love it. The silver accents on the black body are a nice touch. We particularly like the old school-style rocker switch on the side, which acts as the on/off button. It's all very minimal but without looking boring, and will definitely make you look like more of a pro while using them, even if you're really not. The clipper body has a good weight to it: it's perhaps a little heavier than your standard clipper set, but still light enough to use for longer periods. The added weight also means it doesn't feel cheap in the hand.Packed with precision ground blades, an adjustable taper lever and 10 combs for a wider variety of cutting lengths, the Rapid Clip has just about every short hair style covered, and you can even do fades with the bundled taper combs. It can also be used cordless or corded, which scores it big marks for ease of use. (Image credit: Future)Wahl Rapid Clip Review: PerformanceWhere the Rapid Clip really comes into its own is performance.During use, we found that the device has a good overall ergonomic feel thanks to its slim, curved handle that ensures a great grip and a well-balanced performance. It cuts where it should without being phased by thicker hair and is also super comfortable to use. Precision is top notch and we just cannot fault it. The close-cutting stainless steel blades feed the hair in one swipe. In fact, we might even go as far as saying they are a little too sharp. We say that because many people who make a purchase of the Rapid Clip are likely to be amateurs, or people who have never even used an electric clipper before. And so we advise beginners to be extremely careful when using these clippers - especially upon first use when you've not adapted to how sharp the blades are.Nevertheless, this clipper cuts hair exceptionally well, leaving everything looking smooth and even thanks to the lightweight, compact design, which makes it easy to work around the contours of the head, quickly. When it comes to battery power, Wahl's Rapid Clip are fully charged within three hours and offer 120 minutes of cordless run time, which is by far enough - even to cover a family hair cutting session.(Image credit: Future)Wahl Rapid Clip Review: VerdictThe Wahl Rapid Clip is by far one of the best home hair clippers out there. It's got a great classic style, it's ergonomic and easy to use and best of all it's got the precision to cut hair the way you want it, effortlessly. And with an RRP of under £50, we can't think of a better clipper to splash your cash on. First of all, you should note that clipper blade performance can deteriorate due to dirt accumulation and not always blunt blades. Therefore, maybe all you need to do is to clean your clipper. Anyway: Here are a few quick steps on how to sharpen your clipper blades… Note: Not all clippers have these two screws; especially those with detachable blades. But the removal concept is similar. Thereafter: Wash the blades using either warm water or isopropyl alcohol. Step 3: Dry and Test Your Blades If the performance is still sub-par, then proceed to step 4… Highlighting the blades makes it easy for you to know how much you've worn them down; that way you won't overdo it. Smart, right? And: Assuming you have the best sharpener for clipper blades, use your brush to clean both grit sides to ensure there is no foreign debris. Splash some water on your sharpener for lubrication. Step 5: Sharpen Both Your Blades Gently press on the blade and move it back and forth along the stone; work with the stone's entire top surface for longevity and even wear and tear. Also: Keep checking to see whether the marker highlight is disappearing. After around 15 passes, the highlight should be non-existent and the blade sharpened. Thereafter: Turn the sharpening stone to its 8000-grit side and repeat this step again on the same blade. Once that's done, do exactly the same process for your cutting blade. And by now, you should have both the combing and cutting blades well-sharpened. Once that's done, you should turn on your clipper and lubricate your blades by placing a drop or two of clipper oil. Why? Well, it not only ensures that the oil is evenly distributed but also keeps your blades sharp for long. After that, clean your tools and place them in a safe place for when you'll need then again. How to Sharpen Hair Clipper Blades 2021 Maintaining a Hair Clipper Hair clippers, like all electrical devices, need routine clean up and maintenance. The trimming ends of hair clippers are blades that are made up of metal. It is subjected to wear and tear when you use it regularly, so it is important to sharpen it. The device also lasts long when you maintain it like this. If you would like to know more about hair clipper maintenance and sharpening, follow the guide. Here, we have listed the various methods of sharpening and cleaning your hair clipper blades to ensure high performance and longevity. It is recommended to wash your hair clips every six months. But this obviously depends upon the quality of the blade and the thickness of your hair. If you notice that your hair clipper is underperforming, it is a sign that it needs some maintenance and sharpening. You might want to increase the frequency of cleaning and sharpening if you use it regularly. Cleaning a Hair Clipper The first step in maintaining a hair clip starts with cleaning. If the device is not clean, it is easy to get damaged and malfunction. Since the hair clipper is an electronic device, you should take extreme care while trying to clean them. Most of the hair clippers come with a user guide that tells you how to clean and maintain the device. We have detailed the step by step process has to follow to clean your hair clippers effectively. Take out the blade- There are a lot of hair clippers available that are waterproof. This is relatively easier to clean because you just have to put it under running water. These clippers also automatically turn off when it is connected to an electric device to avoid any hazards. For clippers that are not waterproof, you will have to detach the metallic attachment from the body of the device. This will allow you to reach every nook and corner of the clipper to remove short pieces of hair or other debris. You can easily remove the blades by removing the screws on the bottom sides of the blade. You can use a screwdriver and tweezers to easily get the job done. Make sure to leave the screws in a safe area otherwise you might lose sight of them and lose them since they are so small. Remove hair and debris– When you have been using a hair clipper regularly or for a long time, there will be a lot of debris and dirt stuck in it. This might be present in hard to reach areas so you will have to use a small brush or earbuds to thoroughly clean the blade and body. Since the blades are made up of metal, it is prone to rust. If you notice that your blades have rusted, use a blade cleaning product to remove them. You should soak the blade in the solution for a few hours before brushing away or using a cotton ball to remove the rust. Dry the blade– You can wipe the blade with a clean piece of cloth or tissue. If you still notice particles of dust, you can use the solution and repeat the process until it is gone. Sometimes, the rust doesn't come off at all. This means that it is time to change your blades. Try the blades– Now that we have cleaned the blades, they are ready to be used again. Simply reassemble the parts using a screwdriver and get back to work. You might have to leave it on for a minute or two before starting to use it on your hair. But if you notice that your device is still underperforming after cleaning, it might need some extra polishing. Most of the blades need routine sharpening and this might be an indicator of that. Sharpening your Hair Clippers Sharpening your hair clippers is necessary to maintain the longevity of the device. They also give you better performance when the blades are sharp. Although this might seem like a tedious process, you can always switch to a self-sharpening hair clipper to get the best results. What are self-sharpening hair clippers? Self-sharpening blades are one of the latest developments in hair clipper technology. This is a much-needed feature that makes life so much easier for us. These clippers use a simple technique to maintain the sharpness of the blades. Self-sharpening clipper blades contain a blade and a piece of metal that rub against each other and cause friction. This helps in sharpening the blades every time you switch the power button on so you never have to worry about manually sharpening your blades. How to Sharpen Hair Clipper Blades Now that you are looking forward to sharpening your hair clipper blades, you will need to keep a few things ready. A screwdriverA whetstone (3000 and 8000 combos)Paper towels or rag clothLubricant oil Prepare the whetstone This is the first and foremost step in sharpening a hair clipper. A whetstone, also known as a sharpening stone is a fine-grained stone that helps in sharpening your metallic tools and accessories. They are made of natural as well as artificial materials. You can easily find these at hardware stores. Whetstones are available in various shapes and sizes but you can use a small whetstone for this since the blade is only a few centimetres long. Rub the blade against the whetstone You have to place the blade at a 30-25° angle and rub it against the whetstone. The key is to create friction between the whetstone and the blade. Make sure to only do forward movements and do this about five to ten times until you feel that the blade is sharp enough. Turn the blade and repeat the process on the other edge. You will notice that the blade looks shinier than ever. Remove any residue or ground-off metal powder using tissue or a wet cloth. If your hair clipper blade is made up of ceramic, you will have to use a diamond sharpening stone for best results. You can also finish off with a fine honing stone. This will make the blade look sharper and even. Reassemble the device Now that your blades are all sharp and shiny, You can attach them back to the body of the hair clipper. Simply use a screwdriver to screw the blades back. Just be careful to make sure that you are screwing it in the right direction and have spaced it according to the original distance. Apply lubricant oil Equipment like hair clippers that are used regularly need regular polishing. This will ensure the smooth functioning of your hair clipper. This is why you should use a lubricant like oil on your devices. For a hair clipper, it is recommended to use an oil after two to three times of using the device. Simply add a few drops of oil to your blades. This will help in reducing friction and preventing overheating. Make sure to use light oils that do not clog the blades. You could also ask your barber or hairstylist for a recommendation. Run the clipper After cleaning, oiling and sharpening your blades, it is now time to use them on your hair. But you should run the clipper for a few minutes so that the blades can run together. This helps in further sharpening the blades. This will further increase the quality of the blades and make it easier for you to trim your hair. Now that we have looked at the various ways to maintain and sharpen your hair blades, let us take a look at some of the best hair clippers available in the market.
